

Stand up, fight back!

WHEN: Tuesday, June 2nd, 2015 three days before Walmart's shareholder meeting

WHERE: Walmart nearest you

TIME: 20 minutes of your day

WHAT YOU CAN DO:

Organizations and activists like you have been calling on Walmart to rehire all of the workers who were terminated in all five stores and reinstate them to their own stores, or in the interim, pay those workers or transfer them to other stores.

If you can spare 20 minutes to stop by a Walmart near you and deliver the letter and petition that has thousands of signatures on it to a store manager. Those store managers will then call Walmart's Home Office in Bentonville, Arkansas and let them know that people all across the country care about those closures and associates who have lost their jobs.

WHY:

Pico Rivera has long been a hotbed for worker activism. A powerful group of primarily Latina women led the first Walmart strikes there prior to Black Friday in 2012. They held a sit-down strike, led civil disobedience outside that very store last fall and have been vocal leaders in the fight for $15 an hour and access to full-time, consistent schedules.

The store was closed abruptly along with four others nationwide for an alleged national plumbing emergency, yet local officials in all of the locations confirm that Walmart never applied for nor received the necessary permits for such work. We want to send Walmart a strong message right before their annual shareholder meeting on June 5th that we will all continue to stand up and fight back calling for them to make real changes on the issues that Walmart impacts
