McDOWELL COUNTY SCHOOLS PROVIDED FREE SCHOOL SUPPLIES FOR ALL STUDENTS

Back to School McDowell

Southside K-8 students were eager to get back to school.

In what has become an annual tradition, Reconnecting McDowell participated in August back-to-school events at Kimball Elementary, Welch Elementary and Southside K-8 schools.

McDowell County Schools provided free school supplies for all students this year, and Reconnecting McDowell augmented this with journals, lip balm, hand sanitizer and other supplies. Nonprofit organizations in the County contributed additional supplies and services, including winter coats, shoes and clothing, as well as information about social services.

TACKLING LITTER PROBLEMS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTY

Make It Shine McDowell

A fledgling coalition—known as Make It Shine McDowell—has formed to tackle litter problems throughout the County. The coalition includes members from various churches, Adopt-a-Highway groups, volunteer fire departments, 4-H, the Sheriff's Office, FACES (the Family Resource Network in McDowell) and concerned residents.

Make It Shine's first official event was a countywide cleanup held Oct. 23. A special effort was made to address the main transportation routes in McDowell: State Route 16 and US 52. Participants collected more than 300 large bags of trash. The County supplied gloves, grabbers and bags, and picked up the filled bags for

IN MEMORIAM

Jason Grubb

Reconnecting McDowell joins the City of Welch and community in mourning Jason Grubb, the city's business development specialist, who died on Oct. 7. Grubb was honored at the City Council's November meeting.

"Jason had a heck of a passion for Welch," said Mayor Harold McBride in a Nov. 3 article in the Welch News. "He worked tirelessly and made a lot of achievements for Welch. He had a good vision for the city and knew we could make this happen and believed in it. He worked very, very hard toward that."

Grubb is survived by his wife, Stacy, and five children.

IN MEMORIAM

Larry Hairston Sr.

Reconnecting McDowell mourns Larry Hairston Sr., who died on Sept. 25. Hairston worked a variety of jobs in McDowell County, from coal mining to running a grocery store to owning a garbage disposal business. He was also employed as the transportation manager for the McDowell County Commission on Aging until he retired.

Hairston is probably best known for being pastor of Beulah Missionary Baptist Church in Big Sandy, W.Va., and also ministering at Lovely Zion Missionary Baptist Church in Kimball. In 2019, he was elected mayor of Gary and began work on several improvement projects for his beloved hometown.

Hairston is survived by his wife, Patricia, a son and two daughters, seven grandchildren, 19 great-grandchildren and many other relatives.

THE MOBILE FARMERS MARKET RETURNED TO 16 SITES AND ADDED THREE NEW STOPS

Go Growcery Finishes Year Two

At the end of October, the Go Growcery project completed its second year. The mobile farmers market returned to 16 sites in McDowell County this season and added three new stops—Mullens, Pineville and Oceana—in Wyoming County. The project is funded by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

'We were delighted to work with local farmers to supply fresh produce to the areas we established last year and to new locations as well.'

"The second year of the Go Growcery mobile farmers market built on the foundation started in 2020," says Spencer Moss, executive director of the West Virginia Food and Farm Coalition, the entity running the project's day-to-day operations. "We were delighted to work with local farmers to supply fresh produce to the areas we established last year and to new locations as well."

WVFFC and Reconnecting McDowell are committed to building equitable and resilient local agriculture in the southern coalfields. We are especially excited that the program accepts EBT/SNAP, including SNAP Stretch, making it easier for residents to incorporate local produce into family meals."

Go Growcery sold more than $13,000 worth of produce to more than 9,200 community shoppers between June and October 2021.

West Virginia Department of Agriculture Grant Helps McDowell Food Production

As part of ongoing efforts to increase local food production and help rectify food insecurity in the County, Reconnecting McDowell received a West Virginia Department of Agriculture specialty crop grant to construct a high tunnel and school farm at Southside K-8 in War.

Goals of the grant include education about crop production, market opportunities for local produce growers, creating an agriculture club at Southside K-8, and providing community-based workshops. Crops grown in the facility will be used in the school and sold to the Go Growcery project in 2022.

BROADER HORIZONS ALUMNI EDUCATORS

Spotlight on Broader Horizons

It is always our joy to share the milestones of our Broader Horizons alums who continue to make us proud.

Broader Horizons is Reconnecting McDowell's mentorship program where high school students in their junior year are paired with a mentor and then participate in edifying trips and activities for a year. Here are some career highlights that showcase how they are contributing to the County's progress through education.

Adrienne Montgomery, a first-year participant in Broader Horizons, is a long-term substitute teacher of health at Mount View High School.

Emily Hicks has been teaching for three and a half years and currently teaches fifth-graders at Kimball Elementary. She recently graduated from a master's program in special education at Concord University. Hicks was a first-year participant in Broader Horizons.

Faith Poore, from the second year of the program, is in her second year of teaching prekindergarten at Welch Elementary.

Jim Bob Sparks, who participated in the second year of the program, is teaching social studies at River View High School and is the assistant football coach.

Nadia Johnson, who was recently featured in our 10-th anniversary issue has become the Communities in Schools facilitator at Mount View middle and high schools. Communities in Schools is a dropout prevention organization that believes every student should have equal access to critical resources. Johnson participated in the third year of Broader Horizons.

Congratulations to our Broader Horizons educators!
